

Boat Transport Florida

Destination Bound Marine Transport & Service

Preparing your boat is the most important thing that you have to do before transporting it. Below is a list of some things that you should do before transporting your ship

- Make sure all doors are closed when leaving the ship for the last time before transportation.
- Make sure all loose items in the cabins and cockpit are secured.
- Lower the GPS and radio antenna.
- Take down any bimini, cockpit, or plastic covers and leave them securely in the boat.
- Remove any house hold items - no household items may be transported in the boat.
- Masts of sail boats must be lowered down and secured to vessel correctly.

Another important thing to know is whether you can have fuel and fresh water in the boat upon transportation or not. This boat transport company in Florida is pretty flexible with this rule. They wish that you don't leave your tank any more then 1/4 full while being transported, especially for the big boats. This is only requested due to the highway weight requirements.

The boats are wrapped in a protective covering that is created by boat manufacturers and specialty companies around the world to protect the boats and yachts during a transportation. You can get shrink wrapping in most sizes. Destination Bound Marine Transport & Service claims to "specialize in shrink wrapping".

It is true that Destination Bound Marine Transport & Service is one of the best boat transport services available in Florida to date. They offer terrific customer service, unbeatable rates and best of all, you can invest your faith into them.
